

THIS ISN'T HORROR

Aaqib Uddin Hashmi
Yash Srivatsava

PAGE 1 – THE DREAM BUILDING

*I stand in front of the glass tower again, heart racing.
Sunlight hits the building like it's blessed.
Petals drift through the air even though there's no wind.*

*Me (thought):
"This is where my life changes."*

I straighten my shirt and walk in.

PAGE 2 – A FAIRY-TALE OFFICE

*The doors slide open.
Warm light-spills over me.*

*The lobby looks unreal — flowers.
along the walls, soft music,
people laughing like they have no stress in the world.*

*Some are playing games.
Some are sipping coffee, talking about vacations.*

Nobody looks tired.

Nobody looks pressured.

I believe them.

I want to believe them.

“First day? Relax. This place is heaven.”

PAGE 3 – THE BOSS APPEARS

The room subtly goes quiet.

Not silent — just... aware.

I look up.

He walks through the lobby.

A man in a perfect suit. Calm steps.

Behind him — faint glowing angel wings.

Above his head — thin halo ring of light.

No announcement. No introduction.

But everyone straightens.

Everyone watches him with admiration.

He doesn't speak.

He doesn't smile.

And I know.

PAGE 4 – THE CONTRACT

I'm guided down a red carpet hallway.

The manager is cheerful. Friendly, Safe.

Manager: "Just standard joining formalities!"

I don't question a single word.

Why would I?

This place is perfect.

I sign.

The moment the pen leaves the paper, the office feels... quieter.

People begin leaving.

Lights dim slightly.

I turn to go.

Behind me, the manager watches.

His smile stretches just a little too wide.

Too still. Too long.

I walk out, telling myself I imagined it.

"Just standard joining formalities!"

I walk out, telling myself I imagined it.

PAGE 5 – DAY TWO (OUTSIDE)

The next morning looks exactly the same.

Same sunlight.

Same petals in the air.

Same beautiful building.

Me (thought): "See? Yesterday wasn't a dream."

I walk toward the entrance with another employee

PAGE 6 – THE GATE

*A blue light glows at the entrance scanner.
The man beside me walks through first.*

Mid-step —

His skin loosens.

Slides,

Falls.

Like clothes dropping.

Underneath...

A skeleton.

Still holding his office bag.

Still walking.

Like nothing happened.

I freeze.

My chest tightens.

"No... no no no..."

PAGE 7 – DENIAL

My vision blurs.

Breathing fast.

*"This is a dream. Stress dream.
That's all."*

I turn back.

The manager from yesterday approaches from behind.

Same suit. Same tie. Same friendly face.

Manager: "You coming?"

He walks past me and steps through the gate.

His body twists violently.

Bones snap.

Skin tears away.

He lands as a hellhound in a suit, collar around his neck.

Tag reads: MANAGER

He looks at me.

And barks:

MOVE.

PAGE 8 – I CROSS

*I don't remember deciding to walk.
But I do.*

Blue light washes over me.

Cold.

Like something checking inside my soul.

I look at my hands.

Still normal.

For now.

PAGE 9 – INSIDE HAS CHANGED

The flowers are gone.

The warmth is gone.

Cubicles stretch endlessly.

Skeletons sit at desks, typing nonstop.

No laughter.

Only keys clicking.

And distant barking.

PAGE 10 – THE EYE

Ceiling splits apen.

A giant red eye scans the room.

A mechanical voice echoes.

“Productivity tracking active.”

Every skeleton straightens.

Types faster.

“Productivity tracking active.”

PAGE 11 – THE BOSS ROOM

*I see the glass office.
Inside...*

*The angel wings are gone.
The halo gone.*

Now the boss sits as a tall, shadowed figure.

A scythe rests beside his chair.

Same suit.

Same posture.

But now I understand.

He was never an angel.

He just looked like one.

PAGE 12 – MY DESK

I sit slowly.

The chair snaps alive,

Straps lock my arms.

Waist.

Legs.

Keyboard slides into place.

Hellhound Manager (barking):

“DEADLINES.”

DEADLINES.

PAGE 13 – THE FIRST CHANGE

My finger aches.

Skin cracks.

Bone shows.

I stare.

Around me, no one reacts.

They're already gone.

PAGE 14 – REALIZATION

Me (thought, hollow):

“This isn’t punishment.”

“This is employment.”

PAGE 15 – TIME COLLAPSE

Clocks don't move.

Lights never change.

Work never ends.

More skin falls.

Less of me remains.

PAGE 16 – REFLECTION

Black monitor screen.

I see my face.

Half skull.

Half human.

Me:

“When did I stop being a person?”

PAGE 17 – PROMOTION

The hellhound drops a collar on me.

Tag: SENIOR EXECUTIVE

I don't resist.

I don't feel anything to resist with.

PAGE 18 – CYCLE

Morning again.

Golden light.

Flowers.

Music.

A new recruit walks in, nervous and hopeful.

I stand near the door.

Coffee in hand,

Perfect smile.

“Welcome to the family.”

Final thought:

“I hope he doesn’t notice the smell of burning behind the flowers.”